More music for grown-ups. And iDiots.

Newsletter Vol. 2 / April 2008

Martin Gordon

Following the exhaustive (and exhausting) Gordon-abend at London's Metro Club in March, a long lie-down was indicated, followed by the stirrings of Part V of the Mammal Trilogy. Thus preparatory work begins – more information as it takes shape. Recording dates are set for October 2008.

Radio Stars

The celestial bodies of Radio Stars are brushing up their tans in preparation for considering whether they should think about the possibility of a return bout. So far, the only concrete date is scheduled for 2042, only 32 years after the March gig. Book now! There may be more news soon. Meanwhile the live album from 1977 is gaining (or 'garnering', to use the popular but sphincter-shrivelling expression beloved of just about everyone) enthusiastic reviews.

Mira

The legendary (i.e. forgotten) 1995 album 'New Hope For The Dead' by this wacky collective is now available for download, including unreleased remixes and a live recording of a Todd Rundgren song from the Montreux Jazz Festival. Featuring Martin Gordon and Peter Culshaw and a horde of other individuals both fascinating and dull, the newly-unearthed remixes are the bees knees. Indian violinist Chandru excels himself on 'Let There Be Violins' and MC ExkrewC8 is more than underwhelming on 'The Last Space Station'. This last features the afore-mentioned MC bellowing inanely over a loop programmed by a 2-year-old dyslexic, so it should do very well. There's also a blissful gamelan interlude, there are reworkings of the single 'Let's Not Talk About It' and, ooh, a whole pile of oddities. Download only from all reputable outlets, such as iTunes. And from all others...

Radiant Future cultural products

There will shortly be a veritable flood of mammal-related Radiant products, including intimate underwear and T-shirts for your dog. See the summer in with a sultry Radiant Future messenger bag. Drink your early morning coffee from a Hogwash mug, or the first of your evening beers from a Lobster stein. Luxuriate in a Radiant Future thong as you travel to work on the early morning tube, or donkey. Watch this space at the end of April.

Tip of the Month

Never marry a uniped or an Indonesian twin. That worst of all worlds, the uniped Indonesian twin, should naturally be avoided like the plague.
