Jet

Well, don't speak too soon. We told you that 'More Light Than Shade' by Jet was now once more available, and the world breathed again. It turns out that this wasn't strictly accurate or, to put it another way, it was wrong. We were not being economical with the Truth, in fact we have a rather nice relationship with the Truth and are often to be seen propping up local bars together, swearing at Vice, Immorality and Iniquity as the mood takes us. However, it transpires that (a) it's out of stock and (b) once a certain amount of orders have built up, then 'More Light Than Shade' will be repressed.

We don't mean repressed in the sense of having it's liberty taken away from it for no clear reason and it's being sent to Guantanamo for six years with no trial, I should think not. It will not be renditioned, have it's testicles forcibly removed with a toothbrush and be forced to listen to Celine Dion all day. It will not take part in bizarre naked human pyramids for the benefit of people who never got past a third-grade education, whatever one of those is. No, no, and thrice no. When we say repressed, we mean that once again, three dimensional objects with lovely full-colour booklets, will be available. CDs, innit. Here is what the All Music Guide says about this unique aural artifact. That's not to mention what WE say about it.

So what we suggest is this: anyone who wants one should go here, and their names will be placed on a waiting list (no payment is required at this point). If you want to possess this inimitable lifestyle requisite, this is your only possibility. When we reach critical mass, the manufacturers will spring into action. They told us so. We believe them. Let's go!

Radio Stars

It seems that gigs are planned in the UK for the end of 2008, culminating at the Forum in London with the Damned. Details will be announced. Well, it makes sense to announce details, doesn't it, otherwise nobody would know. Some more reviews of 'Something For The Weekend' here.

Mammal V continues

Demos, demos and more demos. And then sifting, rejection, improvement and inspiration. And then The Hague. And then it all begins again.

Forum

And don't forget the Martin Gordon Forum, where you can inflict your half-baked, ill-considered, under-developed ideas upon your fellow creatures, and read theirs as well.
